As of November 2023, the needs of Syrians and host communities are higher than ever, particularly in light of widespread economic collapse, the cumulative impact of 12 years of conflict, climate-related challenges, natural disasters, and various other socio-political factors.

Despite the continuing efforts of humanitarian actors, the Syria crisis remains one of the world’s most complex humanitarian and protection emergencies. In 2023, 15.3 million people are in need of humanitarian assistance — the highest number since the onset of the crisis in 2011. This includes 7.7 million women and girls, around 4 million of whom are of reproductive age. Meanwhile, more than 6.8 million Syrian refugees remain as refugees in five neighbouring countries — Türkiye, Lebanon, Jordan, Iraq, and Egypt, nearly half of whom are women and girls.

This report offers a bird’s eye view of UNFPA’s operations within the context of the Syria crisis. The report is prepared by the UNFPA Regional Humanitarian Hub for Syria and the Arab States (The Hub) in Amman, and spans operations led by UNFPA offices in Türkiye, Lebanon, Jordan, Iraq, and Egypt, in addition to operations led inside Syria, both from Damascus and cross-border via Türkiye.

The quantitative data presented in this report is cumulative, covering achievements made between January 2023 and the reporting month.

Regional Situation Report on the Syria Crisis

As the end of 2023 approaches, the needs of Syrians and host communities are higher than ever, particularly in light of widespread economic collapse, the cumulative impact of 12 years of conflict, climate-related challenges, and various other socio-political factors.

Despite the continuing efforts of humanitarian actors, the Syria crisis remains one of the world’s most complex humanitarian and protection emergencies. As of early 2023, 15.3 million people are in need of humanitarian assistance — the highest number since the onset of the crisis in 2011. This includes 7.7 million women and girls, 4.2 million of whom are of reproductive age. Meanwhile, more than 6.8 million Syrian refugees remain as refugees in five neighbouring countries — Türkiye, Lebanon, Jordan, Iraq and Egypt, nearly half of whom are women and girls.

Compounding the impact of these challenges is the growing threat of climate-related shocks, with serious drought and flooding creating additional needs and threats. More than a decade of conflict has also resulted in large-scale destruction of the water and sanitation infrastructure, leaving significant numbers of Syrian families in overcrowded displacement sites and poor WASH conditions. Up to 47 percent of the population rely on often unsafe alternatives to piped water, which constitutes a major risk factor for disease outbreaks, including cholera.

Women & girls continue to bear the brunt

Assessments and focus group discussions conducted by UNFPA show that gender-based violence (GBV) continues to pervade the daily lives of Syrian women and girls impacted by the crisis. Their lives are marked by mutually reinforcing forms of violence and gender inequality, often exacerbated by discriminatory attitudes based on age, displacement status, disability, and/or marital status. This has created an environment in which women and girls are consistently devalued, controlled, exploited, and then blamed for the violence they face.

“Things have gotten much worse in recent years,” explains Sali, a young woman living in Aresha camp, who was forced into a child marriage when she was 14, shortly after the crisis erupted. Fortunately, she was able to access services at a UNFPA-supported Safe Space, which helped her overcome her trauma. “The situation is the same for so many girls around me, but many are not able to find support as I did.”

Unsurprisingly, women and girls throughout Syria and the crisis region are telling UNFPA that the violence against them has become normalized. Harassment, intimate partner and family violence, child and forced marriage and subsequent pregnancies, and sexual violence and exploitation are consistently reported, while new trends, such as various forms of technology-facilitated violence, have also been observed in recent years. Adolescent girls in particular face a wide range of challenges that usually accompany them throughout their lives. It begins with restrictions on movement and domestic violence, and progresses as the girl grows to include child and forced marriage, domestic violence, early pregnancy, sexual violence, and sexual exploitation, among others. Girls are also being denied their right to an education, which further limits their life prospects and can entrap them in an unending cycle of violence and exploitation.

UNFPA stands with those impacted

Furthermore, amidst the tumult of the past 12 years, marked by conflict, displacement, economic downturns, and escalating dangers, the pleas of millions of Syrians often seem lost in the cacophony of global crises. Yet, undeterred by the staggering adversities they face, Syrians across the region persist with tenacity. Individuals of various ages and backgrounds, including women and girls who have endured gender-based violence, showcase extraordinary resilience and an unwavering resolve. Many strive to transcend their circumstances and past traumas, aiming to secure a brighter future and opportunities for their children and close ones. Some channel their experiences into creativity and advocacy, emerging as artists, activists, and innovators, and becoming pivotal voices within their communities.

UNFPA and humanitarian actors will continue to advocate for the rights and well-being of all Syrians, particularly women and girls. As of November 2023, as part of its regional response to the crisis since the beginning of the year, UNFPA has delivered SRH services to more than 1.8 million people, while more than 800,000 were reached with services designed to prevent and respond to GBV, including more than 333,000 adolescent girls. More than 14,800 women were provided with cash and voucher assistance, and around 10,000 LGBTQIA+ individuals were served.

As humanitarian needs continue to increase across the country and region, scaling up the response to the particular and growing needs of already vulnerable women and girls, including those who are pregnant and at risk of violence, is ever more crucial. In 2024, UNFPA is appealing for a total of $132.5 million to fund its operations throughout the crisis region. This includes an appeal of $67.3 million to fund UNFPA’s crisis response across the whole of Syria.

Syrians & host communities still face an uphill battle

Over 6.8 million Syrian refugees are dispersed across neighbouring countries — Türkiye, Lebanon, Jordan, Iraq, and Egypt. Among them, the women and girls confront heightened vulnerabilities due to the prolonged crisis, with GBV posing an increasing threat. Many find themselves in densely populated and precarious environments where the danger of harassment, assault, and exploitation is ever-present. The deteriorating macroeconomic situation, exacerbated by the war in Ukraine, has pushed numerous families towards harmful survival strategies, including child and forced marriages.

Furthermore, Syrian refugees endure persistent discrimination in their host countries, which hampers their efforts to heal from trauma and to reconstruct their lives. This discrimination is multifaceted, impacting their access to work, education, healthcare, and essential services. For refugee women and girls, this often translates into an elevated risk of violence and an obstructed path to legal redress. Such discrimination is a formidable obstacle to their societal integration, leading to their marginalisation and social exclusion. This stark reality accentuates the critical need for interventions that are specifically designed to address the distinct needs and adversities faced by these women and girls.

UNFPA’s SRH services, delivered through a network of 20 community-based primary health care facilities and a network of mobile clinics, are specifically designed to address the distinct needs of adolescent girls and young women and girls, including those who are pregnant and lactating.

Over the past several months, civilian life and humanitarian assistance were severely impacted by artillery shelling, air strikes, land mines, and unexploded ordnance, creating fear for millions of Syrians who have known nothing but conflict and displacement since 2011.

In Deir-ez-Zor, for example, the UN has documented a known nothing but conflict and displacement since 2011. Over the past several months, civilian life and humanitarian assistance were severely impacted by artillery shelling, air strikes, land mines, and unexploded ordnance, creating fear for millions of Syrians who have known nothing but conflict and displacement since 2011.

AS THE CHALLENGES DEEPEN, WOMEN AND GIRLS CONTINUE TO PAY THE PRICE.

The conflict in Syria has created one of the most severe and protracted humanitarian crises in the world today. Millions have been displaced both inside the country and outside as refugees, especially in Türkiye, Lebanon, Jordan, Iraq, and Egypt. The crisis has permanently altered the fabric of society in Syria itself, with far-reaching ramifications for its future resilience.

Assessments and interviews conducted by UNFPA since 2016 have also been able to illustrate the profound effect that years of instability have had on women and girls, particularly adolescent girls, who face a variety of unique risks. Lack of individual autonomy, movement restrictions, forced and early marriage, denial of resources and opportunities, and sexual and physical violence continue to be part of their daily reality, creating a web of violence that can transcend generations.

Despite testing their limits, however, the crisis has also revealed the remarkable resilience of women and girls, many of whom defy enormous odds to build brighter futures for themselves and their families.

Cross-border operations in Syria are essential to ensuring that women have access to sexual and reproductive health services and are protected from gender-based violence. With the ongoing crisis, women in Syria face numerous challenges, including limited access to healthcare, displacement, and increased risk of violence. UNFPA’s cross-border operations enable the organization to provide vital assistance to women in areas where access to life-saving services is limited or non-existent.

Through its cross-border programming, UNFPA provides essential support to those in need, including emergency reproductive healthcare and gender-based violence response and prevention. These services play a crucial role in saving lives and protecting women from GBV, which has increased significantly during the conflict.
Safe Spaces in Türkiye are providing an integrated response to refugees in need, including both gender-based violence and sexual and reproductive health services in the same facility.
